Senior police officers have warned that Britain's inner cities are threatened with an explosion of drug-related killings

In a series of incidents over the past two days, police have reported at least one man was shot dead and several more injured in London

The capital is the latest region to experience an upsurge in the use of firearms on the streets by drug gags who are using guns to enhance their status We've being told the victim went to an unspecified address yesterday evening

Where he was shot several times both on and off the premises.

I understand that the bullets were fired from several different guns and that after staggering for several minutes he collapsed on the ground before dying on his way to hospital

Rhudeboy just shot someone

Filled him full of lead
