(Milan Hlavsa/Martin Algy)

They whisper in your ear words that deafen the soul
Open the cage of your body; there's a thing that will do it

It's a thing that will make a tiny door in your body
Transform the thick darkness of your consciousness
Into colored light
Rubber monsters march into the distance
You wade through a cloying river

A whip drives you along a glass road; breath blows things away
The body is gone
You look for your doors, try to enter
A gentle whistling assaults your ears
Beyond the world of waking, nothing lies in wait
One side of things is satin
The other is rough
