Climb the stairs, take his hand

Take his word, there's a place to land

So you weigh the risk of another fall

But you heed the moon when you hear her call

And up on the roof and out on the ledge

You let go to love, and you step off the edge...

Oh...you keep falling you give your love away

Oh...you keep falling in love without a net

You use your heart to break your fall

Like a dream lights go down

Crowds below never make a sound

And you want to run but you need to fly

And you fall again, but you close your eyes

And up on the wire, alone on the stand

You let go to love, but there's nowhere to land

Oh...you keep falling you give your love away

Oh...you keep falling in love without a net

You use your heart to break your fall

Love's no gift, love will end

You learn to fall and you learn to bend

And your diamond wings break like glass

You jump again just to see what happens...

Oh...you keep falling you give your love away

Oh...you keep falling in love without a net

You use your heart to break your fall
