There's a groom and a bride in my mind
sending postcards of memories.
There's a wicked witch,
a suicide cigarette, and climbing trees.
There's a mountain and a valley and a little girl who is something sweet.
She's the fortune teller Sally, I'm the drunken clown
who always falls asleep.
I was faking death to wake up new
'cause I was too afraid to stand in my shoes.
I called you on the telephone were you home?
It didn't sound like you.

Set me up another shot.
Close the window stop the clock
let's sing Grecian lullabies
I'm Dionysus in disguise
No one's going to rescue you,
'cause no one has a fucking clue.
So let's be civilized.
Let's say I love you.

There's a ghost in my seat kissing girls and using up my stolen charm.
He says he'll give it back. He was once an honest man before he bought the farm.

I was seething with an impious rage
Because I was stuck inside a poem-less page
I was conquered like a byzantine on Halloween
And woke up in a cage.

Set me up another shot
Close the window stop the clock
Let's sing Grecian lullabies
I'm Dionysus in disguise.
No one's going to rescue you,
'cause no one has a fucking clue.
So let's be civilized.
Let's say I love you.

Set me up another shot.
Close the window. Stop the clock.
Let's sing Grecian lullabies.
I'm Dionysus in disguise.
No one's going to rescue you
'cause no one has a fucking clue.
So let's be civilized,
not so petrified.
Let's say I love you.
