They say to me
unlock this door
the curiosity becomes a scream what could be behind it behind this door
stands a piano
the keys are dusty
the strings are out of tune
behind this door
she sits at the piano
but she doesn't play anymore oh, that was so long ago

There, at the piano
I listened to her
and if she began to play
I would hold my breath

She said to me
I'll always stay with you but it only seemed that she played for me alone I poured her blood
in the fire of my rage
I locked the door
they asked for her

There, at the piano
I listened to her
and if she began to play
I would hold my breath
There, at the piano
I stood beside her it seemed she played for me alone

The door is open
I heard the mother plea
The father struck out at me
They tore her from her chair
No one believed me there

This is so insane
from sorrow and the stench

There, at the piano
I listened to her
and if she began to play
I would hold my breath
There, at the piano
she listened to me and when I began to play
she held her breath
