Where the bells are a stone is sleeping
And noone can read it but me
The red cock on the fence
Your heard once was he
The fear impaled on this fence
I godig for it each night
To see what is left over
Of the face that was laughing so bright
Chorus:
I spend the, night where the bells are
Among snails, a lonley beast
During the daytime I pursue the night
Because you escape from me a second time
My hands are digging deep
To find what I missing so much
And as the moon in her most beautiful dress
Your cold lips with mine I touch
And I embrace yuo tenderly
But now your skin like paper tears
Into pieces you dissolve
This is your second escape

Chorus
And so I take what is left of you
The night is hot and naked are we
The cook that greets the morn with curse
The one who chopped off his head was me
Where the bells are a stone is sleeping
And noone can read it but me
The black cock on the fence
You heart once was he
Chorus:
I spend the night where the bells are
Among snails, a lonley beast
During the daytime I pursure the night
Because for the second time
And the last time
