I see the busy bee buzzing and his caterpillar cousin go crawling across the grass butterflies flutter by

In the sunny summer sky and ants go marching past

I hold a shiny little leaf pick up a rock to see what's underneath watch a bird flying wishing that I had wings sometimes I wonder about lightning and thunder and why the clouds roll 'round what makes a rainbow how does a garden grow right up out of the ground

it may not seem like much to you but I'll be busy the whole day through just sitting here
contemplating the nature of things aint it wonderful aint it grand nature's magical wonderland maybe someday I'll understand how it all fits together when the sun goes down I'll be hanging around with the flickering fireflies

following moonbeams dreaming my big dreams counting stars in the sky

but I'll be busy tomorrow too

oh, it may not seem like much to you but this is what I love to do
just sitting here
