

Randy Travis

"There'll Always Be A Honky Tonk Somewhere"

Visit "There'll Always Be A Honky Tonk Somewhere" on MotoLyrics.com

There may not be a Superbowl in 2083
Cars and trains and video games will all be history
The world just keeps on changing, things come and then they go Nothing lasts forever except one thing I know

There'll always be a honky tonk with a jukebox in the corner
And someone crying in their beer and one old hanger-oner
And a lady looking lonely from a losing love affair
Yeah there'll always be a honky tonk somewhere
Yeah there'll always be a honky tonk somewhere

There may be factories on the moon and farming out in space
It seems there's nothing here on earth that something won't replace
But as long as there's a broken heart there'll be a place to go Where good ole boys meet good ole girls and the wine and music flow

There'll always be a honky tonk with a jukebox in the corner
And someone crying in their beer and one old hanger-
oner
And a lady looking lonely from a losing love affair
Yeah there'll always be a honky tonk somewhere
Yeah there'll always be a honky tonk somewhere

There'll always be a honky tonk with a jukebox in the corner
And someone crying in their beer and one old hanger-
oner
And a lady looking lonely from a losing love affair
Yeah there'll always be a honky tonk somewhere
Yeah there'll always be a honky tonk somewhere

Visit Randy Travis page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.

