As I was walking on the bridge the other day,
I thought I saw you but you ducked and drove away.
I could've sworn you told me that you were gonna be on the town.
I wanted to make sure but I couldn't track you down.
And then the other night I tried to surprise you at your work,
But the guys in your office told me you'd gone home
early with a smirk.
Funny thing, you weren't at home and I began to sense
a change.
It was then that I figured out that something was a little strange.
For so long I thought you were better than anything,
But now I realize that you're not the way you seem.
You must have thought that I was much too dumb to figure out
That you're a lying cheat that's always running about.
Like all those nights you told me you were going out with the guys.
Did you think I'd believe you after you told 26 lies?
For so long I thought you were better than anything,
But now I realize that you're not the way you seem.
For so long I thought you were better than anything,
But now I realize that you're not the way you seem.
