You left the town, you changed your clothes
You opened up, you're writing prose
You knew you'd never be like them
You knew you'd never be like that

Your life is full of restaurants
You're judging people with a glance
No one can compare to you
You're always up to something new

But if you stop and close your eyes you know exactly where you are
Yes if you stop and close your eyes

In the streets of the suburbs of nowhere
They have no start and no end
A Sunday walk, then, now and forever
Again, again and again

Oh take me out, take me away
That was all we had to say
To anyone that passed our lives
The parking lots, the waiting wives

You loved her then, you love her still
But there was so much time to kill
Your picture's taken every night
Just hope they get the lighting right

Watching the world pass by outside from the backseat of your daddys car
Watching the world pass by outside

On a street in Bridgewater River
It has no start and no end
You're gonna walk it now and forever

Yes, we'll be running now and forever
And I missed the sound of your voice
Yes, we'll be running now and forever
You will never wanna get points

Come a street in Bridgewater River
It has no start and no end
You're gonna walk it now and forever

Yes, we'll be running now and forever
And I missed the sound of your voice
Yes, we'll be running now and forever
You will never wanna get points
