The train should leave by nine but it is always a bit late
Almost every morning you must hurry from the station
If you take the tunnel it can save you a few steps
But then you must remember there's a red light at the crossing

At the office we all know November will be tough
One call out of four will have to give us a new order But everyone seems happy and we have a nice new boss
He knows us all by name and says hello to us each morning, but...

No one will miss you when you die
No one will think of you when you cry
No one notices your brand new t-shirt
Although you've done all that you should
You've been polite and you've been good
And you worked hard to lose that stupid accent

Next Sunday we will go and look at a new house There are some nice ones that they're building near the station
If you can do some work yourself it wouldn't cost that much
And your man is handy; he's already built a loft bed, but...

No one will miss you when you die
No one will think of you when you cry
No one notices your brand new t-shirt
Although you've done all that you should
You've been polite and you've been good
And you worked hard to lose that stupid accent

No one will miss you when you die
No one will think of you when you cry
No one notices your brand new t-shirt
Although you've done all that you should
You've been polite and you've been good
And you worked hard to lose that stupid accent

I remember last year we spent the summer by the sea
In a rented cottage that felt almost like our own
What we'll do this year we have not decided yet
But we've worked hard so we might get a few days extra off

And though you have a brand new home
And you've invited everyone
No one can remember your address
And though you've practiced for so long
And you know almost every song
No one dreams about you when they're sleeping

No one will miss you when you die
No one will think of you when you cry
No one notices your brand new t-shirt
