Can you, can someone tell me, did it fall on deaf ears again? It echoed through the room. it's hard to care for transient hearts while you're wishing you were miles away, thousands of miles away. So I'll fade away and only these words will remain. Still you'll never hear me screaming that I'm nothing. I am nothing without you. I have bent over backwards still your words silenced me, and it echoed through the room. Your words, they're all that I know. The only thing that you've left for me here, not so easy to escape. So I'll fade away and only these words will remain. Still you'll never hear me screaming that I'm nothing. I am nothing without you. I want to be so brave and live without fear of what you say. Too many times my innocence was broken and betrayed.
