(Törnqvist/Esbjörn Svensson)

Oh yes it rains and yet the sun shines through

And there's a rainbow sparkling next to you

You turn your head and you try to see it

But you don't see what I do

I see the ladies watching where they tread

Holding umbrellas high above their heads

In slowmotion I saw you were smiling

Was it something I said?

In another time we might just watch the boaters
passing

I'd keep you in the corner of my eye

In another place we might be laughing

and I'd know how to try

We better leave I'll just finish my coffee and now the sun is gone, it simply pours there's no rainbow, there is no excuse to hold on anymore

In another time we might just watch the boaters
passing

I'd keep you in the corner of my eye

In another place we might be laughing

So there it is, and though I really want you to remain in sight, I look away

Just to see if somewhere there is a sunbeam

If there is a sunbeam, a rainbow is coming our way
