Alone In the Atmosphere

I'm finding that it's easy to stall.

As I sink into the city, I'm waiting for your phone call.

Wishing there was somewhere to go, and I'm missing you.

Yeah, I'm missing you..

I'm diving in an ocean of all of the times we swore we'd fall,

But I am alone, and I am wishing there was someone to call.

I'm wishing there was somebody here.

Alone in the atmosphere.

Someday the sky's going to clear, and I'm going to find a way to get down from here.

I'm nervous, and I'm clearly a mess.

My mind is a wreck, and my head is like an unmade bed.

But it's as good as it gets when I think of you.

So, I think of you.

Every bit of bad I forget from the moment you walk in.

You're every medicine I need to let me live.

I'm wishing there was somebody here.

Alone in the atmosphere.

Someday the sky's going to clear, and I'm going to find a way to get down from here.

Head In My Hands

I'm shaking the day on my nervous legs

To find out what happened to you.

I'm breaking my brain trying to find a way

To make to phone lines let me through.

Here I am, my head in my hands,

And my legs won't let me stand until you land.

If I could see you, then I would help breathe for you.

But your body's so bruised now that I feel it, too..

I rise to my feet, trying to hard to believe

That your heart is still steadily beating.

It's everything in me to go back to sleep,

But I can't until I know that you're breathing.

Here I am, my head in my hands,
And my legs won't let me stand until you land.
If I could see you, then I would help breathe for you.
But your body's so bruised now that I feel it, too.
