We were staring at the stars and we heard a clap of thunder then the moon gave way to rain and it tore apart the sky so we lay flat on our backs 'cause in the rain no one knows you're crying on top of a mountain under the sea in the austin moonlight after the summer heat dance you lonely dancers won't you dance for me i swear i will give you everything that is me did we try too hard last year did the money make us monkeys and with everything you fear it comes at times when you don't know you've got all this behind you a broken hand like a broken wing does not hold you back but sets you free
