Baby, I'm blown wide open
My belly is full of stones
My heart hammers on though it's broken
The frost has got into my bones
Will you repair what you have broken?
Will you return what you have stolen from me, baby?
Don't go dead on me, I need you here to breathe
To hold me when I cry, to ease me when I bleed
Baby, I'm walking wounded
So lonely it's hard to breathe
My blood rushes though it's poisoned
Be careful in whom you believe
Will you repair what you have broken?
Will you return what you have stolen from me, baby?
Don't go dead on me, I need you here to breathe
To hold me when I cry, to ease me when I bleed
Baby, I'm almost empty
My muscles are tight with the strain
I keep thinking you'll come and get me
Before I get used to the pain
Will you repair what you have broken?
Will you return what you have stolen from me, baby?
Don't go dead on me, I need you here to breathe
To hold me when I cry, to ease me when I bleed
