When A Flower Grows

When a flower grows,
Like sunshine and sweet smiles,
And you used to love to watch
Its everchanging seasons.
And you lose the reason you once had,
But you still know all the reasons
You're refusing the rising of my blue, blue sun-

Chorus:

Why do you blow her mind
With all the reasons you need to give?
These are her people, they have always loved her-
And if you don't mind, she screwed up again,
So I guess she'd take it out on them-
There is only one good reason,
She cannot give her love to him-
He loves the purple Cairo, baby,
More than the life she has to live.

So she said, with a sweet, sweet smile
That's on her face,
"I will drag my feet up to that place"-
I'd be more than greatful for any man,
Who's strong enough,
To love me that way and still be tough!
Until you just can't take it nomore,
Even when you're walking out the door!

Chorus:

But she can't keep her head,
With her eyes on the burning sun
In that place,
Because, sweetheart, the truest heat
Is on her face-she's got a heartbeat!
But she is not beholden, to her sugarbabies,
So it's cool up there, they say,
"The company's select!"
.....peace and thankyou.....

Chorus:
