"After The Rain"

There's nothing left to prove.
There's nothing we can say.

We've counted every word, like stars and all the moons.
We've buried them away as I promised I would.

After the rain soaks through your bones, we carried the
guilt, we carry our own.
After the pain, careless and cold, we carry the life that you'll never know.

You cursed at all the world, and you wished you never could.
You cherished everything. (That won't help us now.)
You locked yourself into a room and silenced the pain in your head.

After the rain soaks through your bones, we carried the
guilt, we carry our own.
After the pain, careless and cold, we carry the life that you'll never know. No...

You couldn't cope, you cut it off and left us all. (and left us all)
I still feel the warmth you left but now all your color has faded away.

After the rain soaks through your bones, we carried the
guilt, we carry our own.
After the pain, careless and cold, we carry the life that you'll never know.
...that you'll never know.
...that you'll never know.
...that you'll never know.
