Never thought I be in the place.
It's someone else's life I'm living.
Wish I were living a lie.
The hardest part is when the bough breaks,
falling down and then forgiving.
You didn't kiss me goodbye.
I'm choking on the words I didn't get to say,
and pray I get the chance one day, yeah.

(Chorus)

I still run, I still swing open the door.
I still think you'll there like before.
Doesn't everybody out there never come 'round?
Some things a heart won't listen to.
I'm still holdin' out for you, yeah.

I can hear you smile in the dark.
I can even feel your breathing,
but daylight chases the ghosts.
I see your coat and I fall apart.
To those hints of you I'm clingin'.
Now when I need the most.
I should get up, dry my eyes, and move ahead.
At least, that's what you would have said.

(Chorus)

I still run, I still swing open the door.
I still think you'll there like before.
Doesn't everybody out there never come 'round?
Some things a heart won't listen to.
I'm still holdin' out for you.

Faithfully, trace your name while you sleep.
It's the only true comfort I feel, yeah.

(Chorus)

I still run, I still swing open the door.
I still think you'll there like before.
Doesn't everybody out there never come 'round?
Some things a heart won't listen to.
I'm still holdin' out for you

Holdin' out for you.
