

Richard Marx

"Wait For The Sunrise"

Visit "Wait For The Sunrise" on MotoLyrics.com

I was born an only son
Didn't take to the rules like a normal child
Prisoners of the things I've done
And it's the price you pay, you livin' fast and wild

I've spent too many nights lookin' over my shoulder
And the ways of the world make a heart go colder
Get nowhere left to hide
The fight in me has died
So I must wait for the sunrise

Friend to fear and loaded gun
Live life like the owner of a heart of stone
No one touches, touch no one
But the road gets weary when you're all alone

I've spent too many nights lookin' over my shoulder
And the ways of the world make a heart go colder
Get nowhere left to hide
The fight in me has died
So I must wait for the sunrise

Too much done to undo
No one I can run to
I need one more chance to live my life again
Live my life again
Again

I've spent too many nights lookin' over my shoulder
And the ways of the world make a heart go colder
Got nowhere left to hide
The fight in me has died
So I must wait for the sunrise

I've spent too many nights lookin' over my shoulder
And the ways of the world make a heart go colder
I got nowhere left to hide
The fight in me has died
So I must wait for the sunrise
Ohh ohh ohh

