How difficult it is to say I'm sorry
To betray an oath
An anniversary without promises
Without even one kiss
To defile the bed we slept in
And the table we enjoyed
And to drink from the glass we drank from
With different lips
It's life
What fault is that of mine
That it (life) involves me with a new affair
That leaves me blind
And with its game
Moves me away
From your poor heart
Goodbye, I tell you
And I feel like my own worst enemy
Our past together is ripped apart
By an affair that didn't mean anything
How hard it is to love again
To compare "four hundred thousand" other smiles

To your smile

And to give myself completely

To even begin to love so quickly

In such a short time/so soon

And to suddenly feel feelings

Without knowing if I want to

It's life...

Goodbye, I tell you

And I feel like my own worst enemy

Our past together is ripped apart

By an affair that didn't mean anything

Goodbye, I tell you

And in that goodbye is my punishment

I love you and I say that I don't love you

And my tears soak into the ground

Goodbye, I say to you; Goodbye, I say to you

You, beginning and end, you will always be with me
