As I watch your life go up in flames
You'll swear up and down you'd like to change
When the sun sinks slowly into the sky
Now you're right where you started again

With nothing to say
Without an argument or case
When it's said and done and done and said
And now what's another day?

I can feel these changes right before my eyes
I see a dying fire inside your eyes, inside your eyes

When will you stop and realize the worth and value of your life?
As you suffocate yourself within this mindless ninety-five

Wake up there's more
And your life is nobody's but yours
Now it's said and done and done and said
And now what's another day?

I can feel these changes right before my eyes
I see a dying fire inside your eyes, inside your eyes

You're running circles around my slow pace You've reached the finish line only to realize there was no race
I'm sick of being stepped on for the things I choose
And I give and take and now I've taken all I could

And now I've taken all I could
And now I've taken all I could
And now I've taken all I could
(I've taken, I've taken)
And now I've taken all I could
(I've taken, I've taken)
And now I've taken all I could
