I run

I raise my head, I watch the sky free from clouds Illuminated by the last rays of the sun: the twilight

The shade advances upon the road, and I devise a defiance with myself

The light is life, the shade is death

Sometimes the insignificant things of life become essential

Sometimes the gleams in the dark of life that give the strength to go on...

In my mind the game becomes reality and a true fear Passes through me, into my soul, into my eyes

The speed, the wind of my face, the chest rises and drops

My legs leave the the road behind my back, with frenzy

Adrenaline it's metal taste fills my mouth

I clench my teeth

My will against the law of the universe

I reach the light, I raise my arms, I stop and cry like a child

I shout towards the sky, my joy for a beauty and useless victory
