So we walked out and through the night
We lay down under the stars
And the sweat on our skin gave us away
And you came in like the wind
That blows through this open door
And in that storm I was swept away, swept away

And the day you left, you gave a little charm to me
That I wear it 'round my neck
Oh, every time the little charm
Might brush against my body
You come in like the wind
That blows through this open door
And in that storm I'm swept away

There's a river that's flowing underground
Where it starts and where it ends
It's a mystery like where'd you go and how far and why
I could throw little charm up at the sky
Curse your name a thousand times
In the end it'd do no good

You can't stop the heart when it wants to turn
You can't stop the body 'cause it still burns
Where you come in like the wind
That blows through this open door
And in that storm I'm swept away, swept away
Oh, still swept away, yeah, swept away
