"The Man Who Knew Too Much"

It's just the same old and story
About a man who knew everything
It wasn't long, until he was done
All the knowledge, it was gone
He told everything that he ever knew
To everyone, yes he was just like you
The only thing, that he forgot
Was the trust, from everyone

He talked in knowledge, not the words
He had no experience to come right out
He kept everything in his head
He never went out to say it out loud
He stayed alone, he stayed alone
He couldn't come, he couldn't come
He kept everything in his head, until he was dead

He knew too much, he knew too much
No more trust, he caught himself
In a young lust, he was caught in his head
He knew too much, he knew too much
End of the story, it's the end of the story
Nothing was special, no more glory
