These words I was destined to write
Will find peace on the paper tonight
Like it makes a difference
If they live or they die

And Iâ€™ll stay up till 6 A.M.
Killing words and re-writing them
Like it makes a difference
To the publicâ€™s eye.

Try hard as I might
I can not write a song without a name

I am alone and thatâ€™s OK

I will live life in my own way
I will eat breakfast after sunset on the fence
And I will let rebels disobey
And I will let angels sit and pray
But I will not settle for a life without suspense
And thatâ€™s the difference

My feet, they are naked and cold
While the sky, like a halogen bulb
Works to make a difference
I watch the morning glisten
Now I know that the things Iâ€™m missing
Are not as bright as I thought theyâ€™d be Theyâ€™re not as bright as me

And itâ€™s One Hundred And Six A.M.
But this songâ€™s still my timeless friend
Herein lies the difference
Because you know, youâ€™ve got to listen
To yourself when youâ€™re reminiscing
Iâ€™ll take my time writing this down
Iâ€™ll be writing it down
Iâ€™ll be making it up, though.

Thatâ€™s indifference to a story that was told to you
By a world with the point of view of a horoscope

Their leaps of faith and misplaced hopes
Their penitence is worse than their thrones.
