"the steps of faith fall on the seeming void, but find the rock beneath."

-john g. whittier

I guess i thought a letter would be less confusing
So for your eyes i write another waterlogged excuse
Toil and turn and watch another secret burn
Controlling words is just something i just wasn't born to do

There is a secret beneath you

In my silence i defend my common sense
And i see through all the stupid things i do

It's hard to write a letter with an open mind
When all i saw was underneath a satisfied embrace
That exposed your wondrous face

In my silence i defend my common sense
As i'm walking along my familiar fence
And i see though all the stupid things i do
And that this path i'm on will never lead to you

In my silence i defend my common sense
As i'm walking along my familiar fence
And i see though all the stupid things i do
And that this path i'm on will never lead to you
And i'm looking back to only see a spark
As i finally take a step into the dark
