What if I said it's over?
What if we said the words?
Would you hold me closer?
Make this work?

What if we find we're stunted?
Familiar comfort gone
All that we were abandoned
All we are

These days, we're a little broken
We're a jaded
We're a little burnt, oh

These days, we're a little harder
We're a little stronger,
But we're a little hurt

So maybe we should go back
Remember when things were new
When we were less distracted
When we all knew the truth

Before we all numbed ourselves
Before we knew it all
When there was middle ground
And when we all stood . . .

These days, we're a little broken
We're a jaded
We're a little burnt, oh

These days, we're a little harder

We're a little stronger,
But we're a little hurt

And each and every single day
We'll learn to love the things we hate
We'll give a little more to us
We'll find a way back to love

We'll not allow ourselves to fall
From each others pedestals
Discovering the little things
Remembering the joy they bring

These days we're all wasting time
We're all walking blind
Embrace a brand new day

Or walk away
Or walk away
Or walk away
Or walk away

These days, we're a little broken
We're a little jaded
We're a little burnt oh

These days, we're a little harder
We're a little stronger
But we're a little hurt
We're a little hurt.
