Rugburns
"You Should've Told Me"

I sit here all alone
And I'm feeling green
I press play on your
Goddamn phone machine
His nasal whine
Follows me through the door
His teeth are so nice
They'd look good on the floor

You should've told me
They should've told me
Christ, you should've told me after all those years I
spent
Praying to you on my knees in my room back in Palm
Springs
Yeah, yeah, yeah
Mmm-mmm

I pull your letter box
From beneath your bed
And I look through the letters
And all the lies he said
'Bout how he would taste you and tempt you and tease
you
And twist you around like a circus balloon
Heal you, feel you
And take your ass out to the zoo

You should've told me
They should've told me
spent
Praying to you on my knees in my room back in Palm
Springs
Yeah, yeah, yeah
Mmm-mmm

I follow you
Down to the banks of the river
I pull my razor
From my boot as I shiver
You turn around and

"Hey, it's a beautiful night"
I hold the razor
To your neck in the pale moonlight

You should've told me
They should've told me
spent
Springs
Yeah, yeah, yeah
Mmm-mmm

Morning comes
And the sun it hurts my eyes
I've long stopped hearing
The sound of your muffled cries
The water is pink
And it moves with the tide
Don't worry, Honey
I'm right here by your side

You should've told me
spent
Springs
Yeah, you should've told me
They should've told me
spent
Springs
This can't be heaven
Must've took a wrong turn
'Cause it sure feels like hell
