did I have the dream?

or did the dream have me?

set off on a night-sea journey without memory or desire drifting through lost latitudes with no compass and no chart flying through hallucination distant voices, signal fires lighting up my unconscious and the secret place of heart

Dream - temporary madness dream - a voice in the wilderness dream - unconscious revelations the morning says, the answer is yes floating through a darkened mirror deep reflection in disguise soaring through lost altitudes without wonder, without fear symbols on a field of vision behind the curtain of sleeping eyes on the instant of waking another world of dreams appears dream - walk in the wilderness dream - unconscious recreation

the morning says, the answer is yes
