She was a nightcap poem queen
Fighting furious
Fancily through an alluring alliteration
Ghostly smile her silent steps Leaving scents and musk upon the sheets

The joyful rebellion, if we could only live for today Willfully floating, our limbs intertwine where we lay Arise from the ashes, our new lives spring from decay

Tasted tongue in throes of the blinding bellows before she burst
Lick lips within the blanket of darkness Burning shapes illuminate, her fingers curve down contoured perfection

[Breakfast Cat Lyrics On]

Euphoric resistance, if we could only live for today Soaring sensation, our limbs intertwine where we lay
Arise from the ashes, our new lives spring from decay

Our revolution is love...
(there is no revolution, if you can't save yourself)

Like morning peace...
And we will dance arm in arm amidst the crumbles of failed empires and tired ideals, long dead from neglect they will serve as our stage and solid foundation
