Judy's full of hesitation,
She can't give herself away
But still dries every single rose

She tries to fight the early morning
But her mind keeps her awake
With all the things she doesn't know

I think she's quite aware
No one ever fell for her,
They can't tell her from Eve

And though she'll cut her hair
To show herself she doesn't care,
It don't change that much to me

After all you've done,
Will it ever be enough?
Are you only good for nothing?
After all you've said
Can I still watch you pretend
That you're less than everybody?
For shame? For shame

Judy wears out used prom dresses,
Can't stand how the best things get Just use once and then dispose

She knows it gets a bit obsessive,
All the dolls upon her bed
Are always lined in perfect rows

She only falls asleep
if it's Morrissey or me, her life is very long

And though we understand
About as much as a man can,
No one seems to know what's wrong

I know it's never that easy,

It grows with time
I know you fight it with everything,
I know, I know

After all you've done
Will it ever be enough?
Are you only good for nothing?
After all you've said
Can I still watch you pretend
That don't need anybody?
