Step through his trampled wall, the unhinged door betrays it all That far within our faith we were all waiting The broken glass reflects the haze, it shines like endless holy days Struggling to remember what they're celebrating

Well a God descended, and the real time ended His light was lifted just above the law, and now we have to live
With what we did, with what we saw

Well you mend your clothes and patch your roof and slivers of God's Shattered truth grow tender as the grass in clean swept yards
But a Savior came and told us how the truth was all around us now Abandon house and field and gather up the stards

Well a God descended, and the real time ended
His light was lifted just above the law, and now we have
to live
With what we did with what we saw

You build your faith with strength and duty Build your love, but there's a beauty Well you know the scriptures tell, there are a few shards left in hell
And if we wanted God we had to follow, follow him down, him down

There were pictures torn out of their frames and orgies Where we lost our names, ending all with time's real desire Well you ask how God can curse you thus That's not a question asked by us We burnt our books and beds, we fear we've lost the fire

And a God descended and the real time ended His light was lifted just above the law, and now we have

With what I did with what we saw
