In our socks we slide across the floor
Like we are angels over water
Coming home to see your eyes
And the beards we take from... won't cover up the smiles
The nights we stay up laughing 'til we cry,
I know inside that we can hide
As happy as two clams
And if we fight we'll do it right
With mittens on our hands
'Cause we are spoons
The forks and knives are lonely
In their drawer
Underneath the covers we are worm
Laying quite, waiting for the cold and frosty morning
And in my room, I can see the sunlight in your hair
And my reflection in your stern
Let me know that's just us against the world
We are spoons.

At a table set for two, I'll make some tea for you
With spoons that's their life
Hearts on fire I know inside
That we can hide as happy as two clams
And if we fight we'll do it right
With mittens on our hands
'Cause we are spoons
The forks and knives are lonely
In their drawer
Underneath the covers we are worm
Laying quite, waiting for the cold and frosty morning.

And in my room, I can see the sunlight in your hair
And my reflection in your stern
Let me know that's just us against the world
We are spoons.
We are spoons.
We are spoons.
We are spoons.
