The sun goes down around me here And somewhere else it's rising once again The air that fills my lungs to full can Somehow cause a breeze to pull a ship to land

There is not a single moment That You don't see There is not a single moment That You're not here with me

And every thought I've had today, well You knew what they'd be before they were And every heart that beats in time with What You want is sure to find Your voice is heard

There is not a single moment That You don't see There is not a single moment That You're not here with me

Though I try to do my best So often, often now I must confess to wrong As sure as this ol' air I breathe You made a plan for my reprieve to lead me on

There is not a single moment That You don't see There is not a single moment That You're not here with me
