"Dance, Though"

They got married here tonight
They changed some rings, they threw some flowers
I don't believe in anything
'cause I once believed in all of this
Are you with me, brothers, sisters?
Oh, I know you've all been there Dancing though you hearts were breaking Dancing though you aren't here

And I'll be dancing though my heart is breaking Dancing though my heart is breaking
Breaking in the rhythm with the base in the ground
Breaking in the rhythm of the sound of my aching head
Volcano inside but a polished surface
Floor at night, gonna be the last one on it
Dancing though my heart is breaking
Dancing though you are not around

Held a speech that was too long
No one was laughing at the punchlines
Maybe 'cause I've forgotten where the punchlines lies in all of this
And the gentlemen and ladies
Were married couple as it seems Right where your shoulder meets your neck is where I hid all my dreams

And I'll be dancing though my heart is breaking
Be dancing though my heart is breaking Hired wedding singer, I am begging to sustain me but you're covering up the sounds of telephones not ringing
Play something that we all know
I know something that everyone knows
Working your legs when you're barely breathing
Dancing though your heart is bleeding

And I'll be dancing though my heart is bleeding
And I'll be dancing though I'm nearly sober
In a year or two this will all be over
In a year or two this will all be over

In a year or two this will all be over
In a year or two this will all be over
In a year or two this will all be over
In a year or two, oh it's never over
