They claim as one
But we all know that without me you are nothing
Until depressed and invalid
Let our love be postmodern
Afflicting her personal onto a judgement; she left it so broad
How, if I've never wronged you must I deserve too
Hand in hand we will see
That I will take you faster
But this is more than a way and there is more you can say
As it welcomes you to the day of the human portrait please
Lead and glorify these expectations once lost on me
Fear not to kill the king
It is always good to die
Brush the cardiac
Let it flow into me
As you seem to care
As you might seem to believe
Just believe me
But this is a world that I can't
That I cannot violate
For heavy is the head that wears the crown
And heavy is the frame inside of me
Less aristocrats and carnivores expound
By now
We should respond and globalize our fears
And our loves and ourselves
And our dreams
And we should know
That right here
That right now
That we are none other than the defiant ones
Go and take
