I bought a pack of your favorite cigarettes
So I could finally taste you twenty times a day
It's just another think I need to quit
Cause you both are killing me slowly

I had a bottle of your favorite wine tonight
Tasted so similar to everything of yours
It ended bitter, but started out so sweet
It knocked me on my ass, but first knocked me off of my feet

There are others like me
And others like me know no others like me
I see them every week
In circles at the meetings

I take two Â– will you call me in the morning?
The what ifs and would be's are swarming
Didn't know that you'd be habit forming
Didn't know that you'd be habit forming
Thin line between adoring and abhorring
These side affections are hard to ignore and
Some women ought to come with a warning
Some women ought to come with a warning

You light me up
And snuff me out
Or leave me burned out on the ground
You weren't that easy to put down
You weren't that easy

You're Hell bent
And heaven sent
I burn cigarettes
Now like incense
To bring you back to me
But you're not that easy

There are others like me
And others like me know no others like me
I see them every week
In circles at the meetings

I take two Â– will you call me in the morning?
The what ifs and would be's are swarming
Didn't know that you'd be habit forming
Didn't know that you'd be habit forming
Thin line between adoring and abhorring
These side affections are hard to ignore and
Some women ought to come with a warning
Some women ought to come with a warning

But I like you
So what do I do?

I take two Â– will you call me in the morning?
The what ifs and would be's are swarming
Didn't know that you'd be habit forming
Didn't know that you'd be habit forming
Thin line between adoring and abhorring
These side affections are hard to ignore and
Some women ought to come with a warning
Some women ought to come with a warning
