I've been practicing my punches
I think I'm ready to get hurt
Ignoring everybody's hunches
In an old trench coat and a Clash t-shirt
I'll call her later on tonight
And she'll remember me hardly
And I'll pretend that that's alright
And take her out to Vahlere's party

I've been quiet about so many things
It's time that I say something, Say Anything

No matter how much sun you see
It's always raining down on me
No matter how dry I may be
It's always raining down on me

Yesterday she said goodbye
Packed up her shit and walked out the door
My mother tells me that the fault's all mine
While I spread my records out across the floor
Like when we went out that time last week
She finished changing and I didn't even start
That's just the way it's always been with me
Top 5 reasons why I should have done my part

These awkward silences scream at me
Loud and clear in High Fidelity

No matter how much sun you see
It's always raining down on me
No matter how dry I may be
It's always raining down on me

To the curb is where she threw me
All alone with this sick obsession
And all this moves me like a John Cusack movie
But I better hit stop and learn my lesson

I keep hearing the one thing that she said
It's a Sure Thing that I'm Better Off Dead

No matter how much sun you see
It's always raining down on me
No matter how dry I may be
It's always raining down on me
