The garden state has never looked so pitiful and gray As I awake to the garbage left today I hope they take all of my old mistakes 'Cause I can't seem to shake them on my own

My eye it spins when I look at the mirror Glancing at the man I see, with daggers for his eyes I build my castles up in the skies So when it rains, they melt away with shame

Here I am looking down at the bottom of the glasses It's all my fault that I need a sign like shooting stars To help connect the dots and turn my cuts into scars

Oh, all of my fears are getting checked by the medicine I take All other guys just gather rumors of decent There will be a riot in my heart soon It wants to be beneath the open sky

Here I am looking down at the bottom of the glasses It's all my fault that I need a sign like shooting stars To help connect the dots and turn my cuts into scars

My regrets are what keep me still alive I need to make up for all the lies My regrets are what keep me still alive I need to make up for all the lies

Here I am looking down at the bottom of the glasses It's all my fault that I need a sign like shooting stars To help connect the dots and turn my cuts into scars

Here I am looking down at the bottom of the glasses It's all my fault that I need a sign like shooting stars To help connect the dots and turn my cuts into scars

My regrets are what keep me still alive I need to make up for all the lies
