Blessed by a church
You molded with your hands
They send you up that hill
While you wait for change
A clever distraction
You lose your name
And all it's worth
But something does change
We blame the ones we love
A clever lie

I'll keep running after you
But I always seem to stumble over what I've become
I'll keep running after you
There's something healing in the silence when I'm alone with you

His church is the body
But where is the blood
He's centering himself inside
The castles built with mud
He's full of cheap, cheap grace
But as for faith
He has none

I'll keep running after you
But I always seem to stumble over what I've become
I'll keep running after you
There's something healing in the silence when I'm
alone with you

Mon Dieu it's a celebration
Cause I'm coming back to you
I'm coming back
I'm coming back
I'm coming back to you

I'll keep running after you
But I always seem to stumble over what I've become
I'll keep running after you
There's something healing in the silence when I'm
alone with you

Cause in our faith we come together
And make a change for the better
I was living alone
And I cannot tell you why
But I found out
I love you more
