I remember a time when I could count on your words
I never had to think about empty promises
I was so sure that I could turn my back on you
With no thought of what I'd find
When I turned around to face you once again
Where did that go?
Because now it all seems to have changed
I know where to turn
There's no one left so I rely on myself
I can count my true friends on the fingers of one
fucking hand
And through the darkest days I will always have my faith
And though you tried so hard to bring me down
There's no way you could take that faith away from me
I was strangled by your lies
But they only held me back for as long as I remained Consumed by what I despised
The price of my devotion will never be my soul
And all that remains is to let go of the memories
Of what we could have had
Because now it all seems to have changed
I know where to turn
There's no one left so I rely on myself
I can count my true friends on the fingers of one
fucking hand
And through the darkest days I will always have my
You couldn't touch that part of me
There's no way you could ever change the way that I live
All I need...
The only thing I'll ever need is the truth
The truth and what it means to me
The only source of strength I'll ever need
