In a moment, in a lifetime, everything can change
The past just falls backwards and the road turns strange
And I wondered to myself - when my time came

Where were you?

When the die cast, and the road split like an old dead tree
I was washed out, I was fading - no one came for me
When I saw my reflection and watched myself bleed

Where were you? Where were you?
When I fell so hard like I always do
I tried your number; you're the spell I'm under Found no one home, had to just move on
Where were you?

Do you remember the boardwalk night?
The sand in our hair... the fourth of July...

In the distance, there's a graveyard with an unmarked grave
Filled with laughter, with loving; all the joy you gave Where no one came calling no flowers lay

Where were you? Where were you?
When I fell so hard like I always do
I tried your number; you're still the spell I'm under Found no one home, had to just move on
Where were you?
