Always waiting for a word left unsaid.
Always looking for a roadblock ahead.
But don't watch the road — just keep your eyes fixed
on me.

I'm an army and for you I'll extend
Both my arms, an attempt to mend
What's broken and failing to be cured.

In time I'll erase your hurt.
You're a fighter, and you always were.
May your body be strong drawn from strength of character.

When we were babies, we had no idea.
And all the 'maybes' of our teenage years
All but took us out before we even felt in.

In time I'll erase your hurt.
You're a fighter, and you always were.
May your body be strong drawn from strength of character.

If who you are matters at all
When this goes down, if it goes down at all
Then you by far, you have raised the bar.

In time I'll erase your hurt.
You're a fighter, and you always were.
May your body be strong
May your body be strong
May your body be strong drawn from strength of character

Strength of character
God knows you're a fighter, and you always were
How this will end, I can't be sure
But I know your strength of character

Always waiting for a word left unsaid.
Always looking for a roadblock ahead.
But don't watch the road — just keep your eyes fixed

on me.
