How could I know what's going to happen
When I follow your footsteps in the sand?

How could I stop the sea from taking you away
When there's no footsteps left to track?

This time I'll shut the doors to depression
And find the strength beyond the dark
I'll take a stone and throw it at the first sign of moaning heart
There is so many roads to follow,
Oh, which one is mine?

Everybody have some trouble in their heads
Everybody have their share of pain
Everybody fall, so there's no need to be afraid
Everybody need a friend to help them cope with life

How could I breed with no air coming in from outside
What would differ me from dead?

And what would happen If I would suddenly lost ability to sing
Who would sing my songs for me?

These days danger's creeping all around the world
There's no place to hide

So how could I know what's going to happen
When I'm just a little spot in time, wasting its own time?

Everybody have some trouble in their heads
Everybody have their time of pain
Everybody have it, so there's no need to be ashamed
Everybody need a hand to help them dance with life

So caress a friend
Smile to a child
Remember to say a prayer
For all who went to the skies

Go and kiss a lover

Give stranger a flower
Don't be afraid to abase yourself
Always be good to your enemies

Always be good
