Wake up, why won't you just wake up?
And tell me that you're fine.
And with your life in my arms,
I couldn't stop the light.
I throw this cape away,
'Cause I don't want to be your hero,
And I don't want to do this again,
'Cause you don't even know who the hell I have become.
(the hell I have become)

(So please wake up)
I turn around to see your body lying next to me,
I want to save her but she's crying so desperately,
And will she ever understand that I, I am not her
Superman.

So sleep, sleep but I won't wake,
And I still see your face,
it's killing me how much I want you,
And I am still not happy.
(the hell I have become)

(So please wake up)
I turn around to see your body lying next to me,
I want to save her but she's crying so desperately,
And will she ever understand that I, I am not her
Superman.
She started screaming when I told her it was going to end,
I made a promise that I never had to do this again,
And will she ever understand that I, I am not her
Superman.
And just as I hold my last breath,
You take it from me,
She opens her eyes,
She laughs and turns away.
I feel my only poison,
Running through my veins,
She turns once more to smile,
And I'll regret every day.

I turn around to see your body lying next to me,
I want to hate her but she's crying so desperately,
And will she ever understand that I, I am not her
Superman.
She started screaming when I told her it was going to
end,
I made a promise that I never had to do this again,
And will she ever understand that I, I am not her
Superman.

I turn around to see your body lying next to me,
I want to save her but she's crying so desperately,
And will she ever understand that I, I am not her
Superman.
She started screaming when I told her it was going to
end,
I made a promise that I never had to do this again,
And will she ever understand that I, I am not her
Superman,
But you are my Lois Lane.
