You won't find me here the place that you expected me to be in my bed on the second floor I'm outside your house
I'm closing in on you

And all the times you smiled you said hello and thought I was okay
I was planning your final struggle

{Chorus}
When you wake up I'll be there
When you see me you'll be on your back again
When you, when you, when you, when you know you're Already dead, you'll love me too

You will find me here the place you least expected me to be Breaking through your basement window I'm outside your room, I can hear you breathe And all the times you laughed you shook my hand and thought I was your friend I was planning your tragic ending

When you wake up I'll be there

When you see me you'll be on your back again
When you, when you, when you, when you know you're
Already dead, you'll love me too

You'll look down on me with eyes of endless tragedy Try and stop the pain but there's never closure Find your solace in what you could have been

When they look for me the evidence is buried deep Try to guide the way into the darkness

When you wake up I'll be there
When you see me

you'll be on your back again When you, when you, when you when you know you're already dead (you're already dead)
you'll love me too

Looking down on me through eyes that never stop crying Looking down on me
will you ever look away
