What if all these faces
And all of my collected memories
Were just fantasies
Unrealized dreams left to haunt me
Stalking me from the inside

What I remember
Is everything I regret
A past of melancholies
Shames and catastrophies
The illusion I've been given is
Just another warped delusion of my own

If I could look back with
A single trace of sensibility
Could the terms finally arrive
If this was all imaginary
And none of you were real

This slip into discontent
A crisis of identity
How am I to cope with such
Scathing reflections and obscurities
The illusion I've been given is
Just another warped delusion of my own

Who am I to be who I've become
My fucked up world of friends and enemies
I wish it was all just in my own head again
Why did such things come to be
How could I fall for such disposition
Why am I burdened with anguish
Toward the life that I've endured
I can't decide if it was truth
I can't tell if it was all reality

It fucks with me every day of my life

A calming closure won't be reached
I've grown far too disconnected
To put such times behind

And still feel a comfort
In my wrongly wired mind

Wishing it all
Never came to be
While I basked in celebration
I now stare back in disbelief
The illusion I've been given is
Just another warped delusion of my own
The illusion I've been given is
Just another warped delusion of my own
The illusion I've been given is
Just another warped delusion of my own
