"I Will See You Tomorrow"

Outside the world the wind is howling
Through the broken trees
And the moon is shining
As the river meets the sea

And I will see you tomorrow
Calm and bright in tender light
And my heart will be racing
Like your waking eyes

Inside my room the curtain's blowing
And our bed, it lies unmade
But the morning will be broken
By the loving words you say

And I will see you tomorrow
Calm and bright in tender light
And my heart will be racing
Like your waking eyes

Though you're far still your heart sounds loud
Beating time with me
Through the day the only grace I get is
I want to be you

In the world time was rushing
Like the cool evening breeze
But my soul is calm
And I will see you presently
