Soft words pull them from their tall perch.
It all hurts when it's only worth a damn.
But our collective breaths could change the weather,
Let's band together and take this pain out on the road.

[Chorus:]

Neither rain, nor snow, nor the darkest of nights
Will keep a noble bird grounded.

Forfeit the fantasy romancing me into standing still as potential built.

The cup was almost spilled by guilt wilting all the strength I was peddling.

I'm not settling.

Even though a weaker heart can still control the body.

The brain must remain strong to keep those steady hands

One step ahead of nervous feet still faltering.

Now I'm altering those statements I made in haste.

[Chorus]

Let nothing take the place of the grace that has brought us here.
